"Well, my fine fellow, how are you getting on now? have you succeeded in catching a glimse of the white sparrow?"

The farmer only replied to this question by a smile, and then, holding out his hand to his old friend, he said;
"God bless you, Harder! you have saved me and my family from ruin."

Often, in after years, when Herr Ruckwart was a prosperous man, respected by neighbors, and beloved by his well ordered household, he was wont to relate this history of his early life, and thus, by degrees, the saying tisers is that they crowd too much in one advertisement. Almost every thing they have to sell must be named and not one man in fifty reads it. One thing at a lime should be advertised, and that frequently; and the aim should be to excite, not satisfy the curiosity of the readers. For instance, advertise—Subart of admission at the door of the waiting for one hour costing 10s.; half an ever beard of,—saying, such a night, Australia, is a card informing visitors that the editor cannot be spoken to unless paid for his time. Herr Ruckwart shook his head gravely, in answer to this observation, and said:

"They are, indeed, most destructive creatures. For my part I have not the alightest doubt that it is mainly owing to their depredations that my harvest has of late years been so unproductive."

BY BAYARD TAYLOR. The fisherman wades in the surges;
The sailor sails over the seas;
The soldier steps bravely to battle;
The woodman lays axe to the tree.

They are each of the breed of the heroea.
The manhood attempered in strife;
Strong hands, they go lightly to labor,
True hearts, that take comfort in life. In each is the seed to replenish The world with the vigor it needs

The impulse to generous deeds. But the shark drinks the blood of the fisher The sailor is dropped in the sea The soldier lies cold by his cannon;

The woodman is crushed by his tree Each prodigal life that is wasted

In manly achievement unseen, But lengthens the day of the coward, Aud strengthens the crafty and mean. The blood of the noblest is lavished That the selfish a profit may find; God sees the lives that are squandered

And we to his wisdom are blind. Evils of Gossip. I have known a country society which withered away all to nothing under the dry rot of gossip only. Friendships once as firm as granite dissolved to elly, and then run away to water, only cause of this; love, that promised a future as enduring as heaven and as stable as truth, evaporated into a morning mist that turned to a day's long tears, only because of this; a father and son were set foot to foot with the fiery breath of anger that would never cool again between them, only because of this; and a husband and his young wife, each straining at the heated less h which, in the beginning, had been the golden bondage of a God-blessed love, sat mournfully by the side of the grave where all their love and all their joy lay buried, and only because of this. I have seen faith transformed to mean doubt, hope give place to grim despair. and charity take on itself the features of black malevolence, all because of the spell words of scandal and the maniac her morning cup of coffee.

"A pretty sort of housekeeping this is, thought the farmer to himself, as he wife. Whenever you feel worried about "Pray excuse a bit of sarcasm," said issue from gossip and detraction; most

Does Your Light Shine?
